PRACTICE AREAS

- + Information Technology & E-Commerce
- + Intellectual Property

"I take a business approach to representing clients, one that emphasizes achieving business objectives while minimizing risks. My job is to facilitate my client's initiatives and I do that by understanding their expectations and exceeding them at every turn."

Ray Bonnabeau is a partner at Hellmuth & Johnson and chair of the information technology and e-commerce practice group. Since 1995, his practice has been exclusively in the IT and e-commerce fields, working on behalf of large to mid-sized, highly regulated entities in the healthcare, financial and health insurance industries. While his focus is on representing the user or acquirer of IT, he also represents providers of technology from an e-commerce and licensing perspective.

Ray frequently serves as lead counsel to strategize and negotiate agreements in "mission critical" engagements. He has drafted and negotiated hundreds of IT and e-commerce agreements, including multiple eight ($10M+) and nine/ten (100M+ to $2B+) figure agreements for internationally, nationally and regionally recognized organizations. His practice includes a full range of potential IT and eCommerce agreements, including without limitation:

Major System Acquisitions

- Electronic Medical Record/Electronic Health Record systems, PACS, RIS, Laboratory and related subsystems
- Healthcare claims, Payroll and Decision Support systems and related subsystems
