

Marshall H. Tanick

"What others view as legal problems, I view as solution opportunities - opportunities to lead my clients to the results they hope for, efficiently and economically."

For 35 years, Marshall H. Tanick has represented clients in a wide variety of legal matters, with emphasis on employment law; constitutional law, including defamation, privacy, and other communications; education law; animal law; pet law; land law; and business disputes.

As much a student of law as a practitioner of it, Marshall stays abreast of legal trends and the latest case law by teaching at area law schools, conducting continuing legal education classes, and writing extensively for law and business publications. He also welcomes the opportunity to take on difficult cases. "I'm very interested in legal issues," says Marshall. "I see them both as personal challenges and opportunities that can lead to modifications or improvements in law, often to make it more accessible and affordable."

Regardless of precedent-setting potential, Marshall brings to each case a strong work ethic, a commitment to accessibility, and a talent for identifying and explaining strategic options. Clients also benefit from a breadth of experience that helps him understand their legal problems - and turn them into solutions.
