

Matthew J. Bialick

"Doing legal work is not an end in and of itself; it is the means a lawyer uses to solve problems and help clients accomplish goals."

Matthew is a banking, receivership, and commercial law attorney who provides litigation, transactional, and advisory support to a wide array of banks, businesses, and private individuals.

On the banking side, he counsels on the entire lending and collection process for both commercial and agricultural loans. Specifically, he focuses on:

Drafting loan documents

Negotiating forbearance agreements and workout plans upon initial default

Bringing lawsuits and obtaining judgments, decrees, and/or receiverships

Pursuing traditional post-judgment collections

Bringing fraudulent transfer lawsuits revealed through post-judgment discovery

Protecting creditor rights in debtor bankruptcies

On the commercial side, he works primarily on:

Drafting and litigating noncompete agreements

Pursuing complex fraud claims

Litigating general plaintiff- and defense-side business matters and handling appeals

Matthew believes that the keys to effective legal representation are clear communication, attention to detail, and laser focus on the efficient accomplishment of the client's objectives. No matter how good the legal work, Matthew believes a victory is only a victory if his legal representation improves the client's position.

He is licensed to practice law in Minnesota state and federal courts, including the United States Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit. Matthew has argued numerous cases in front of the Minnesota Court of Appeals, including three that resulted in published opinions.
