

Alexander J. Farrell

"A grasp of complexity, the ability to learn quickly, and a deep understanding of the law are essential qualities in a patent attorney, but none is more important than dedication. For many clients, their patent is their life's work, and it's my responsibility to do everything possible to help safeguard their intellectual property and realize its full potential."

Alex is a registered patent attorney and has helped clients from small tech startups to established multinational corporations maximize and protect their intellectual property. He brings in-depth, specialized knowledge when litigating intellectual property disputes. Among his successes, he has:

- Represented multigenerational Midwest companies and companies throughout the United States in several industries, enforcing and protecting their patent, copyright, and trademark rights against competitors

- Helped technology startups leverage intellectual property to grow and become market leaders

- Defended companies against patent claims and helped clients get back to business

- Pursued copyright infringement claims on behalf of software developers against multiple Minnesota governmental entities

- Handled trademark registration matters, patent applications, patent licensing, copyright management, and prosecution

Alex is admitted to practice before the United States Patent and Trademark Office, United States District Court for the District of Minnesota, and the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit.
